

ADELIA RODRIGUES JENKINS

Ms. Rodrigues Jenkins holds a degree in Civil Law from Brazil. She is currently in the process of achieving her Common Law Degree at Nova Southeastern University. Understanding the laws from the United States and Brazil, and speaking Portuguese and Spanish, she is able to provide a customized service to foreign clients.

Currently, Ms. Rodrigues Jenkins has been working as a law clerk at the Law Offices of C. Carolina Maluje, P.A. Her experience in the areas of immigration, contracts, corporation, civil litigation and family law has given her insights to a wide variety of issues. In today's practice of law, different issues can arise with cases that necessitate knowledge of different practices and areas of law, in order to assist clients with the best possible advice. Ms. Jenkins' experience and knowledge allows for the office to have an advantage over other law offices because of that specialized service we can offer our clients.

Ms. Rodrigues Jenkins is also a member of the Nova Law Review team, a research assistant for a Nova Law professor, and a member of the Foreign Lawyers Association. In LSV, her Memorandum of Law was selected as the best student work by her professor.

She is also involved in social work activities, participating under the supervision Ms. Maluje in pro bono cases and embracing causes such as the March of Dimes and other activities. During her Law School in Brazil, she worked as a law clerk for judges and provided legal services to the community through in campus supervised legal aid. Finally, Ms. Jenkins has been assisting Ms. Maluje and Dr. Yassin El-Ayouty, Esq. in various research projects for SUNSGLOW and for international law cases.
